Cautious welcome to latest Crossrail pledge

A CAUTIOUS welcome has been given by Greenwich Council to the announcement from Crossrail that any financial review of the scheme will not involve the removal of any

The announcement came after the council had stepped up efforts to push the case for a Crossrail station in Abbey Wood and the Royal Arsenal in Woolwich.

The council, local businesses and groups have campaigned consistently for Crossrail - the new high frequency, west-to-east railway across London - to include Woolwich as well as Abbey Wood.

Council leader Chris Roberts told GT: "While we remain cautious, this latest announcement is a step in the right direction for Greenwich residents. The case for Crossrail and specifically stations south of the river, Woolwich and Abbey Wood - is unquestionable. The southern spur, as the Woolwich and Abbey Wood section is known, will be the busiest and will generate the most economic benefits on

In my opinion Aiming for a life of words

I'VE wanted to be a journalist ever since I started keeping a diary when I was eleven, eight years ago. It's become a fixation for me, a need to express my opinion on issues affecting our daily lives. Writers can promote development of beliefs and understanding. Where would we be without our daily news coverage, countless newspapers and magazines? In the dark and ignorant of what is happening around us? The stories we read every day shape our opinions and give us a thirst for more information. The society we live in is built on the written word. How could we exist without it? No one expresses this better than George Orwell in Nineteen Eighty-Four. How can we prove the past happened if all documents, news and history is destroyed and then rewritten? This is why I want to go into the field of journalism; the written word is a very important piece of the jigsaw which makes up our lives. In my diary I documented everything I did and wrote down my opinion on events which happened in my life. Writing about my own life for eight years has acted as a catalyst into wanting to write about other, more important issues happening in the world. I did work experience at Toni&Guy Media, which confirmed that I wanted a career in the media. I worked closely with the head of PR and communications. which gave me an insight into this fast-paced, competitive industry. In sixth form I took English literature as an Alevel, which has helped me develop the skill of arguing lucidly and confidently and also established my love for writing. I also studied Geography, which has taught me about the disparity between societies and other cultures, opening my eyes to world issues. Both these subjects, and my passion to write, have helped me secure a place at the London College Of Communication to study Journalism! Wish me luck!

Last chance for Grassroots grant

VOLUNTARY groups working to build community spirit have a few more days to apply for a Grassroots Grant. Funds of up to £5,000 are available to community projects that bring local communities together and help them to improve their neighbourhoods. The money is available through the Capital Community Foundation, a group of public and private donors trying to create social change in London. Voluntary and community groups only have until Friday (October 8) to make an application as the government-funded grant is being cut. Groups can apply if they have been active in the local area for at least one year and they have an annual income of less than £30,000. Catherine Pinhorn is the artistic director of Pindrop Theatre, which runs drama projects with young offenders. The group got a £5,000 grant to help run a second tour of a new play in local schools, colleges and youth centres.

"The money helped us to reach over a thousand young people who all had an opportunity to say something. We need project funding to carry on as we only come together when we have this kind of funding." Applications must be

Dogs and their owners show their class

FIFTY-PLUS dogs and their owners attended a ground-breaking canine awareness and education show in Shrewsbury Park, Shooters Hill.

The event was organised by PC Fiona Genovese from the Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods Team and coordinators Jenny and Graham Penn of the Eaglesfield Park Neighbourhood Watch Scheme. The event focused on the health, care and behaviours of canine companions, while promoting responsible dog ownership and raising awareness about new laws including where you can have a dog off the lead, fouling, fines and Greenwich Council's BARK initiative targeting issues around anti-social behaviour and the mistreatment of dogs.

The Met Police, Pets at Home, Companion Care Vet, Greenwich Council's parks and open spaces department and the Dog Liaison Team all joined in on a fun and furry day.

PC Genovese told GT: "The day exceeded my expectations. It was a great opportunity for dog owners to talk to each other and to key contacts in the borough who are part of a partnership approach to enforcement.

"Dog walkers can see the work going on in the Shooters Hill Police area and in turn can pass on the information." Met Police dog handler Mandy Chapman and her Alsatian Karly - also seen in action on the ITV series 'Send in the Dogs' - proved a bit hit. Mandy said: "Engaging with people, the community and dog owners alike is key to the success of these events. You can train a canine companion to do anything including finding your keys if you lose them while walking - all through the use of scent and repetition."

Nikki Evans, from Pets at Home, Charlton. said: "I am really glad to be involved with community events like this as the Pets at Home team are strongly committed to promoting responsible dog ownership and believe in pets before profit.

"These face-to-face events provide a perfect opportunity to have open and honest conversations with dog owners in a light-hearted and informal way. Not only do we help people and their pets in the shop but we keep an eye out in our car park for dogs locked in cars without access to air and call the RSPCA and the police to help save animals at risk."

Companion Care vet Sinead Ennis provided on-site microchipping services to six dogs for a special event price of £10, while there was a brisk trade in free dog nail clipping and flea and worm treatment.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the council's cabinet member for neighbourhood services, said:
"This was a wonderful initiative in an area that concerns people across the borough. Sharing skills and information at this level can only be good for Greenwich and I hope that events like this are held regularly to raise awareness throughout Greenwich."

How safe is Sutcliffe Park? Please bring

I NOTE that some of the exits onto Eltham Road, SE9, from Sutcliffe Park have disappeared and that the 'Avenue' at the Eltham Road end has been boarded off and there is a earthmover digging up the 'Avenue.' When I approached the workman they said that they were building a road through to the houses, and that they were continuing to build a further 500 houses on the actual Sutcliffe Park. Can you please explain as to why they believe this to be true. How much more of Sutcliffe

Park is to be under concrete, surely taking 33% was enough, after all it was supposed to be the Kidbrooke Regeneration. As it stands today, with more Eltham green space being covered with concrete, perhaps the council should not have been so economical with the truth, and this building work should have been called the 'Eltham Degeneration'. Would it be possible for you to confirm as to whether there is more building work to be carried out on the only facility for our young people in the area of West Eltham, and give an explanation for the closure of the exit gates and the new digging up of the access path, just how much more of Sutcliffe Park do they intend to cede to the developers.

Mrs S A Leighton

Residents can be reassured that the use of this area of Sutcliffe Park is strictly temporary and these areas will be restored once that section of the housing development has been completed. At that point we will aim to improve accessibility to the park. Overall the Kidbrooke development will create around 50 hectares of green open space - more than at present. Ed

Please bring back black bags

MANY moons ago we were told our galvanized dustbins were not to be used and we were to put our rubbish into black sacks provided by the council. FINE – they duly arrived, 26 bags every 6 months. Then the new revelation - now we have 3 bins to fill up. I'm in favour of make do and mend but, for the last couple of years, getting what I need from the council to fulfil my obligations as a fully paidup ratepayer of 50 years has been hard work. I wrote to a councillor about not being issued with black sacks and I was told They do not cost very much". Ok if the black sacks are of a low cost please put them back on the menu and stop moving the goal posts. Also, the starch sacks are shrinking and the recycling ones no longer have handles to pick them up by. They have got thin in quality and it's a bit of a false economy if the bottom falls out.

Mrs J Jeffrey, Abbey Wood

Mrs J Jeffrey, Abbey Wood
• In the current financial climate, it is important we keep costs down and the council no longer provides black sacks for the residual service because we now supply all households with a black topped bin instead.
There has been no reduction in the size of the free cornstarch sacks and the current clear sack is of an equivalent strength to that previously supplied but is less costly. Ed

Make it easier for us to recycle

AFTER reading M Johnson's letter on 24/8/10 regarding recycling household rubbish, I felt compelled to write as an EX RECYCLER. I live in a three-storey high block of flats in Plumstead. We have a bin in a rear shed for normal waste and a recycling bin on the grass. I used to recycle everything - not anymore. Have you ever tried to get a black bin liner full of paper, bottles, cardboard etc into a two-foot square hole? The council workers have pad-locked the main lid of the bin and left us with this pathetic two-foot square hole. It means we either have to leave the bags outside on the grass or stand there in all weather pulling bottles and boxes out of the bin liner to put through this two-foot square.

We also don't get recycling bags. Wake up Greenwich Council. If you want residents to recycle don't make it so difficult for residents to comply residents to comply.

Mrs Ford, Plumstead

 Greenwich Council would like to thank residents for their ongoing efforts to recycle.
 Communal recycling bins used by flats can be filled with paper, card, cans, glass and plastics. At times we have found that other items have been placed in the bins and this has meant that all the items set aside for recylcing have been contaminated. The council has decided that to ensure residents' efforts to recycle do not go to waste that we would try locking the lids of bins to prevent further contamination. We would like to apologise for the inconvenience caused to keen recyclers and will continue to review the situation. Ed

Let's set green standards

IT'S nice to see that Greenwich has grown into such an environmentally conscious borough. I was very interested to read in the last issue about the solar panels being installed in some council houses in Greenwich. It's an important step to start using renewable energy sources and hopefully we will see more similar schemes in the future. But we can't rest on our laurels, both individual residents and the local authority need to challenge themselves to set the standard for green living in the borough. So let's get cycling and recycling and set an example for London!

Happy to volunteer for Games

I GENERALLY agree with G Bridges (Letters September 28) about the need to pay people to do important jobs and that would be fine in an ideal world. For me being part of the action and playing a role in the London Olympics far outweighs any monetary reward I could get for being a Games Maker. It's always nice to be paid for doing a good job but sometimes it's the other rewards you get that count. As Seb Coe said being a volunteer for the Games will give lifelong rewards. I see volunteering as a chance to use and gain skills that could apply in future paid employment and I shall certainly be applying to be a ames Maker.

Full house for Ravensbourne

Visitors flock to iconic building opening soon

OPEN House turned out to a full house for Ravensbourne welcoming more than 500 people through their doors for a sneak preview of their iconic new home at Creanwich Peninsula Greenwich Peninsula which they finally moved into last week.

Members of the public, architecture aficionados and students alike took part in talks and tours with Professor Robin Baker, Bob Harris from Ravensbourne and lead architect Alejandro Zaera-Polo from Foreign Office Architects.

Bob Harris told GT: "Open House is a unique annual celebration of architecture and design across London, with hundreds of venues opening their doors to the public. People clearly loved what they saw at Ravensbourne and now it's time to use this wonderful space for world-class learning."

Lessons tor Humanities Week

STUDENTS at St Ursula's have started the new academic year with a second 'humanities week'.

The Convent School on Croom's Hill, Greenwich, is a specialist humanities school, and last month's event saw all the different departments working together.

It was a chance for students to enrich their day-to-day learning, to make new links with the outside community and to explore the world of business and enterprise.

Year 7 pupils tried out some new foreign languages, as well as taking trips on the Thames and to the Science Museum. Year 8 did some planting in the school orchard, and created dishes with their own-grown vegetables while Year 9s created a drama, music and dance performance based on the theme 'The Tudors'.

Schools in Parents launch film the frame

ENTERPRISING parents have made a DVD to guide others through the process of sending their children to secondary school.

The mums and dads, who are parents of children in the Charlton primary schools cluster saw the official release of their DVD - Moving Up - last week. It was premiered before parents. headteachers and other school staff during a launch event at Charlton House.

The 15-minute movie features families who are members of the cluster's Parents' Forum who have been through or were going through the process of transferring their children from primary to secondary school.

The idea behind the film is to provide information about the application process so that parents can feel more confident when choosing a secondary school.

Jan Beames who is headteacher at Cherry Orchard School said: "Secondary school transfer is a big issue for parents and so many questions come up. Parents are concerned that they are going to choose the school that is going to meet their children's needs.

"The advice in the film is that they choose a school that's right for their child and hopefully it will encourage parents to visit the schools and see for themselves.

A copy of the DVD will be given to all

Year 5 children in the cluster's eight primary schools. But it will also be available to primary schools across the borough and through the council's Choice Advisor who helps families apply for schools for their children.

Charlton cluster manager Deana Dunbar works with families to develop transition projects between the cluster's primaries and Thomas Tallis secondary school.

She said: "Parents wanted something that could help them communicate with each other. The DVD gives parents the information they need and puts it across clearly but what's really good is that it's been done by parents who have been through or were going through the transition process."

Cardwell Primary School parents Ceri Robinson and Raj Mainka are regular volunteers at the school and both feature in the DVD.

Ceri, who has two daughters aged six and eight, said: "Moving up to secondary school can be quite scary and taking part has been really interesting and has helped to answer a lot of questions for me. My daughter uses a wheelchair so I was concerned about the schools being accessible.

Raj, who has an eight-year-old son, added: "When a parent came up to me and said they found the DVD helpful I felt we Aaron Flanagan, whose son transferred from St Mary Magdalene to Woolwich Polytechnic during the making of the film, said: "Being part of the film was a big help for me and I got lots of useful information.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the council's cabinet member for children and young people, said: "What's particularly special about this DVD is that local parents have brought their own first hand experiences to the making of the film, and this insight will be appreciated by parents going through the process for the first time."

She added: "Moving to secondary school can be a stressful time for children and families, and I am confident that this film will provide a helpful and informative way of making the process as smooth as possible.

Damon Hill races to support 'Upbeats' event

FORMULA One racing champion Damon Hill is supporting the campaign to save The Upbeats, Charlton Community Trust's Down's Syndrome sports club. Damon and wife Georgie will be guests of honour at a fund-raising Upbeats dinner on Thursday, October 14, at The Valley, Charlton. Oliver, one of the Hill's four children, was born with Down's Syndrome and his parents are both patrons of the Down's Syndrome Association. Damon said: Georgie and I are delighted to support such a worthwhile cause. The trust was approached by the Down's Syndrome Association to organise a football project for young people with Down's Syndrome. More than 100 young people, from five to 24, have registered and the Upbeats initiative won ITV's People's Millions competition last year with thousands of Charlton supporters voting for the project. Vicki and Antonia switch to pedal power for local charity

by Peter Cordwell

FOR two young women it was very much a case of Mind over matter when they set out on a fund-raising bike ride to Paris.

Vicki Prout, a press officer with the long-established Mind mental health project in Greenwich, and housemate Antonia Dickman - both 25 and living in Greenwich -were looking for a new challenge in their lives.

Joining 130 other cyclists and raising money for Greenwich Mind ticked all the right boxes and the lifelong friends sent into serious training for the 75mile a day marathon.

"We signed up to the challenge in April Antonia was already into cycling and we knew we'd just have to worry about training and raising the money because the event was so well organised," said Vicki.

"I used to live in France and love the country. We're also both massive foodies, so the prospect of getting fit whilst having an excuse to eat lots was very attractive!" They worked out they were burning about 4500 calories per day, and Vicki said: "That's a lot of bananas, cereal bars and jelly babies!'

She added: "I don't think we realised quite how much of an undertaking the trip was at first, but thankfully we got our teeth into training. We were a bit worried as Antonia was ill for about six weeks, but thankfully she recovered and emerged to be super speedy on the trip she got the nickname "Queen of the Hills".

'The memories and friendships from the trip will stay with us for ever'

Vicki and Antonia had to raise £1,300 each. Vicki said: 'We wrote letters, emails, bothered friends, relatives and colleagues, and the response was amazing. Antonia organised a World Cup sweepstake at her work and I did 'sponsor a limb' where people got to sponsor different parts of me.

They have raised almost £3.000 between them and are still chasing up some promised donations.

"It was fantastic, having something to focus on and work towards throughout the summer was a great distraction from other work and life stresses. We've both discovered that we love cycling, and the memories and friendships from the trip will stay with us for ever.'

NOW FOR THE FASY BIT: the girls

Paul raising blog standards

by Dan Stephens

PAUL Wilkinson has always been a good communicator -he's built a career as a public relations consultant. But when it comes to social media, it's personal as well as professional.

Paul has embraced the blogosphere and uses it to get the most out of Greenwich.

He spent his childhood in north London before moving to Greenwich 15 years ago. Hel now consults mainly for construction technology-related companies and part of his job includes advising companies on how they can get the best out of social media, including Twitter and Facebook.

"I think that businesses are realising just how much potential social media sites like Twitter can offer," he told GT. "It has the ability to reach a huge numbers of people at a very low cost. I'm sure we will see more and organisations using it." more

Based in Westcombe Park, Paul sees social media adding to his own the opportunities to get the best out of the borough via blogs like the Blackheath Bugle and the Greenwich Phantom. He said: "I like to keep tabs on things that are going on in the local area and with such sites a wealth of information is available at your fingertips.

"I really enjoy reading and getting involved on several local blogging sites. It's good to meet new people and it gets you out and about. I'm always up for finding something new in Greenwich instead of sitting round the house.

"You get useful reviews and feedback on an array of restaurants, bars and shops in Greenwich and it's often a two-way thing. With sites like Yelp.com you can also blog your own opinion. I even contribute to Wikipedia's articles on South East London.'

Paul - who has two children, Orla, 12, and nine-year-old Gus also uses Greenwich Council's Twitter profile: "It opens up a much-needed dialogue with local people and increases the amount of information available to residents. When used in this way, social media gives local authorities the chance to build an online presence that provides direct interaction with local residents.

"Social media is not going to disappear anytime soon. I think something like 42 per cent of the population is registered on Facebook and astounding statistic. It just shows what a fantastic way to network and build up communications it is.

Another passion of his is bikes. A member of Woolwich Cycling Club, he uses Greenwich's numerous green areas to enjoy riding with his family, with Greenwich Park and the Thames Path.

Perhaps the joys of the Thames Path may not be quite so well-known as those of the park. It has been subject to regeneration in the last decade, making the whole area a great proposition for walkers and cyclists out to enjoy the charms of the Thames.

Paul and his family have even put their enthusiasm for cycling to use for a great cause by participating in two charity rides in the last few years. Twice they went on the Mavor of Greenwich's sponsored bike ride and have also taken part in the annual 24-mile Greenwich and Bexley Cottage Hospice charity ride along the Thames Path.

Community days focus on living well

by Dick Townsend-Smith

PEOPLE living on the Barnfield Estate in Woolwich were able to get to know each other better during a funpacked afternoon where the spotlight was on adopting a healthier lifestyle.

More than 250 residents went along to the community event in Barnfield Road on Saturday, September 25.

included Attractions demonstrations of taekwondo, aerobics, cookery and Gambian dancing, plus an exhibition of drumming and a talent show where young people on the estate demonstrated their singing and dancing skills. There were also arts and crafts, plus face-painting organised by local Scouts. Volunteers supported the planning and organising of the event, and traditional and authentic food was prepared by community members. The event was organised by the Well London project - a three-year project working with local people to transform their health - and its local partners in the Healthier Communities Scheme Greenwich Council, Greenwich and the University of East London.

To promote health and wellbeing there were also checks available for blood pressure, cholesterol and diabetes, and advice from the Stroke Association. There was also advice on giving up smoking, and a competition to test people's knowledge of the health benefits of eating fresh fruit and vegetables, run by Greenwich Cooperative Development Association,

The afternoon also included a volunteers who completed the health trainer course. Well London team members were also recognised for their contribution to looking after the welfare of the community, and certificates.

Brookhill Children's Centre officically launched its new healthy eating cafe during London Open House weekend last month. There were guided tours of the Woolwich centre, workshops, fun activities and a health promotion stall. To highlight what the cafe has to offer there were live cookery demonstrations and food tasting. Greenwich Mayor Barbara Barwick opened the cafe, which will serve low cost healthy home-cooked meals from 9am to 3pm. She also presented a prize to mum of twins Adelina Muikira who won the centre's Name the Cafe competition with the name 'Munchie Lunches'.

What a relief!

NEW measures have been introduced to help new and existing small businesses. The government has increased the level of Small Business Rate Relief (SBRR) available to eligible businesses. The temporary increase runs from October 1 to September 30, 2011 and is designed to reduce fixed costs for commercial premises. It means eligible businesses with a rateable value of up to £6,000 will be entitled to 100 per cent relief on their bill. Qualifying businesses with a rateable value of between £6,001 and £12,000, will also be entitled to relief on a sliding scale between 100 per cent and 0 per cent.

Space-themed reward for young readers

by Dick Townsend-Smith

FORTY young people who successfully completed this year's Summer Reading Challenge with Greenwich's libraries yeart into output groups lest went into outer space last month.

The launchpad for the celebration was the Peter Harrison Planetarium at the Observatory, Greenwich, which hosted a Greenwich, which hosted a special screening of a show called 'The Sky Tonight'. This showed how the galaxies would look on the day of the night of the event - September 18.

The children were among those who met the challenge over the summer holidays of over the summer holidays of reading six library books of their own choice. The theme this year was 'Space Hop', and the historic observatory – housing London's only planetarium – provided an excellent venue.

The children were handed goodie bags containing space-related pens, stickers, a poster, postcards, glow-in-the-dark wristbands and spinning mobiles.

They were also able to meet and talk to children's author Guy Bass, whose Space Munglers monster characters helped promote this year's challenge. Space Munglers trump cards were handed out for every book the children read, and after reading six books they received a certificate and a medal.

The children were chosen, at random to represent each of the borough's 13 libraries and the mobile library which ran this year's reading

The mayor presented a story of the Royal Observatory site, and congratulated the children as well as their parents and carers, who had encouraged them with their reading. She also thanked the library staff, who had guided them through the challenge.

The event was hosted by Dr Marek Kukula, public Marek astronomer at the Observatory. He also took the mayor on a tour of the adjoining Altazimuth Pavilion, built in 1899, which houses an historic telescope. Cllr Fahy told GT: "The Royal Observatory, Greenwich, was the perfect location to celebrate the end of the Summer Reading Challenge. I would like to thank all the staff in the observatory and Greenwich libraries for making this event possible.

"Reading books of their own choice throughout the holidays gave hundreds of local children a flying start for when they returned to school for the Autumn term."

The event mark UK Older People's Day on October 1, which celebrates the achievements and contributions of older people to society.

'Getting and staying active' is the theme of this year's events and libraries across the borough are also featuring book displays focusing on older people's health.

On October 1 visits went to the Forum in Greenwich where Age Concern Greenwich was hosting a day of activities for older people. There was a chance for visitors to talk to a healthy living team about fun ways to stay active, and to get blood pressure checks and massage therapies. The event also marked the official launch of Age Concern London's 'healthy living' campaign report. Cllr Peter Kotz, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for health, adults and older people's services, said: "UK Older People's Day is a national celebration of the achievements and contributions that older people make to our society and to the economy.

"It's extremely pleasing that the occasion is being marked in the borough with these events and they are also a great way for people to find out about the range of options available in the borough for people of their age. I hope as many people as possible make it along to the events and a great time

Throughout the month of October Greenwich marks the achiever History Month. Festivities got under way on Friday with a fashion sh loads more to come, from talks at The National Maritime Museum

Time to remember

Theatre plays its part in BHM

GREENWICH THEATRE is playing its part in Black History Month with two thought-provoking plays. James Haddrell, director of the theatre on Crooms Hill explains what the plays are all about, and why he thinks theatre is so important in

"We've got two big shows coming in, the first in Rum and Coca Cola, which is directed by Don Warrington who starred in Rising Damp, and then he got 're-famous' when he did Strictly Come Dancing - which was a bit barmy. He's a fantastic actor, but he's on this project as director and he's done an amazing job. The show is set in Trinidad, it's about two calypso singers – an older guy 'The Professor', who's spent his life singing to

ICE COOL: Rum And Coca Cola school this younger

guy in the art of calypso. It's a lovely show, and it's on at the theatre from October

'After that we're doing a show called Burn My Heart which is set in Kenya in the 1950s during the Mau Mau uprising. It follows a white boy who is the son of some fairly wealthy white folk and a black guy who runs their estate. The boy is mates with the black guy's son, and then the uprising comes along. It's about how their friendship is tested. It's from a very different angle to Rum and Coca Cola, and it comes from a novel by Beverly Naidoo. It's on right at the end of the month, from October 28-

"Of the two Rum and Coca Cola is probably the more musical – it's a fun, light-hearted celebration of calypso. Burn My Heart is something that's a bit more politically driven, a proper solid drama. I think Greenwich as a borough now is home to such a diversity of heritages, but I think often traditional arts are very 'white' dominated and shouldn't be. So I think BHM is a great opportunity, not only to celebrate all the heritages and bring in a diverse audience, but also getting traditional audiences to go and see something different.

Rum And Coca Cola is on from October 19-23, Burn My Heart is on from October 28-30. To book: 020-8858 7755

BLACK History Month has been celebrated across the UK every October for over 30 years. In Greenwich it's a time to highlight the achievements of the black community and uncover the hidden history of our local communities. There's a comprehensive programme of activities across the borough which includes workshops, readings, music, dance, theatre and special displays.

It all started last Friday with the launch of Black History Month at the Heritage Centre on the Woolwich Arsenal. The centre is also running a special Black History Month exhibition until October 30.

Forthcoming events to watch out for include:

- Two Caribbean-themed plays at Greenwich Theatre
- A chance to meet John Denman, a Caribbean sailor played by an history re-enactor during a workshop at the Old Royal Naval College on October 17, 11am-3pm. (Visit
- www.oldroyalnavalcollege.org). • As part of its Trafalgar Day celebrations the National Maritime Museum is hosting Black Tars, which looks at the black presence in the Royal Navy (October 21, 3.30-4.30pm) and Black Salt, when historian Dr Ray Costello examines the work and experience of seamen of African descent. Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 205

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time. For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

Pick out your ideal property by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic pushbutton system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

The next edition of GreenwichHomes will be available on Wednesday 13th October 2010 at midday and will include any Housing Association properties when available. Closing date for all applications for this issue is midnight on Sunday 10th October 2010.

Regeneration Proposals - Enderby Wharf, Greenwich

Ian Simpson Architects and West Properties are holding a second exhibition of the emerging proposals for the regeneration of Enderby Wharf on the Greenwich Peninsula including the refurbishment of the listed Enderby House.

Since the previous exhibition and consultation events, the proposals for the regeneration of the vacant wharf for a mix of uses including an international cruise liner terminal, new river bus service together with hotel training and residential accommodation, and reuse of Enderby House as a tourist interpretation centre have continued to evolve. These proposals have now been supplemented by the design of a new public square adjacent to Enderby House which is linked to the Thames Path and a series of tidal gardens on the banks of the River Thames. The ambition to release over 50% of the wharf to new open space and public realm has been

Prior to the submission of a planning application, which is to be submitted shortly, we would like to invite you to this exhibition being held on Wednesday 6th and Thursday 7th October 2010 where plans and a model of the proposals will be on display. The event will be held between 4pm and 8.30pm on both days in Christ Church next to the Forum in East Greenwich on Trafalgar Road. The exhibition boards will also be available to view online at www.gvagrimley.co.uk/enderbywharf from 6 October 2010.

Second's out!

It's round one to Second Floor Studio Arts which throws open its doors to the public for the first time next month canvas.

Second Floor Studios & Arts is one of the biggest artist communities in the UK, and its doors will be thrown open to the public for the first time from November.

Over 100 artists will have their work showcased at the studios in Woolwich Dockyard, on November 18, 20 and 21 for the special Open Studio.

The open studio days at SFSA on Harrington Way is a showcase of works from the painters, sculptors and print-makers - many of whom are leaders in their field - and all of whom are acclaimed visual and fine arts professionals. SFSA Project Director Matthew Wood said: "The Open Studio is a rare chance to see professional artists at work, to meet with them, ask them about their inspiration, techniques and work. To get up close and personal with art and artists of this calibre is a special experience and we are thrilled that our 100-strong artist community will be able to share their work with the public this November.' Among the artists' number there are also photographers, graphic and digital designers, animators, illustrators, fashion and jewellery designers, mosaic experts, wood and glass specialists, and interactive sound installation artists. And it will be a premiere of the new work, and the first time much of it will have been given a critique, by professionals or by the public. Second Floor has been built from the ground up, and it is a nonprofit organisation which laid down its first tentative brush strokes in 1997. Since then, SFSA has been steadily growing, with plans in the pipeline for further development of the Woolwich site. In the future it is hoped that Second Floor will deliver studio space for up to 300 artists, as well an education centre and outreach programmes, open access print studios and a 3000-square foot gallery. If the ambitious project is realised it will be one of Europe's largest centres of studio space for artists. Wood added: "Art is created to be shared, and our Open Studio will give our artists and our community that opportunity. It is more important than ever to offer artists arts space and create a community of artists and talented professionals that can be shared with the wider community.'

Award from the Beeb

Rewarded for taking a chance

BLACKHEATH'S Second Chance Choir has been awarded a grant by the BBC.
The Beeb's Choral Ambition scheme has given the group £3,000

towards commissioning a new piece from composer John Webb. The London-based composer - who pens scores for with the Philharmonia Orchestra among others - has been working with the choir to compose the eight minute piece, 'Tide and Time', drawing on texts suggested by choir members and music devised in a series of five choir workshops. The choir's Sheila Armstrong said:

'The award of this prestigious grant is a fantastic opportunity for the Second Chance Choir to develop its interest in new music. We are very excited about the new piece, which while challenging, is very accessible with beautiful and dramatic textures and haunting harmonies. Pretty Woman star...

Julia is pretty awful

"I WAS bored," said my wife. "It was a travel documentary in disguise".

Harsh words indeed from the woman who has every Julia Roberts film ever made, on DVD, Blue Ray and Video, "just in case"... Based on Liz Gilbert's best-selling memoirs - Eat, Pray, Love: One Woman's Search for Everything Across Italy, India and Indonesia – Eat Pray Love marks Julia Roberts latest return to the big screen. It tells the tale of a successful and well-to-do writer whose career, marriage and lifestyle fail to excite her leaving her empty and without direction. Discarding her distraught husband (Billy Crudup), she flies headlong into a relationship with a younger version only to abandon him too, before departing for Italy (to Eat). India (to Pray) and Bali (to Love) Unfortunately however, Roberts fails to convince and we quickly lose sympathy with the central character. Quite why she has to abandon her life for this journey of self-discovery is never clearly explained nor are her choices of destinations - her so-called Indian guru, for example, being her (former) boyfriend's source of inspiration. The apparent random nature of her departure together with her disinclination to attempt any form of reconciliation with either her husband or her malfunctioning life becomes frankly irritating and the movie thereafter begins to drag. Roberts too is surprisingly, disappointing bland, unconvincing and lacklustre. Hindered by some truly awful dialogue – "when I look into your eyes I hear dolphins clapping" – the pièce de résistance for me, Roberts appears tired and to be simply going through the motions. We look forward to welcoming back the energetic and feisty character who so enchanted us all in

Erin Brockovich. Husband Billy Crudup and boyfriend James Franco manage to solicit a modicum of sympathy, but it is Richard Jenkins who steals the show with his blunt and honest criticism of her selfindulgent life. Alas, he too is a victim of the dialogue – "I think that you have the capacity some day to love the whole world", Jenkins tells her at one point at which I almost walked out. That I stayed was largely due the casting of Javier Bardem (whose memorable performance as a psychopathic serial killer in No Country For Old Men, won him an Oscar) as Roberts' love interest. His performance was measured, low key but nevertheless confident and

More could also surely have been expected from a combination of writerdirector Ryan Murphy – creator of both Nip/Tuck and Glee – and cinematographer Robert Richardson of JFK and The Aviator fame.

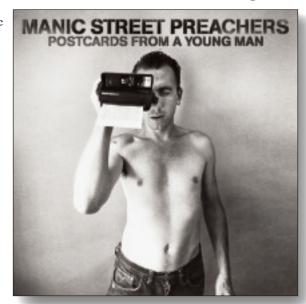

Verdict: The book spent 150 weeks in the New York Times bestseller list but the film fails miserably. 3/10 Dick Morgan Manics converted

Welsh band's tenth album less angst and more pop

IN the early nineties the Manic Street Preachers claimed that they would split up after the release of their debut album, 1992's Generation Terrorists. It was a brash claim made by an angry young band that had built a manifesto on overturning the old guard and changing music. Fast-forward eighteen years and the band have released a tenth studio album, Postcards From A Young Man. Two decades since their inception as The Clash of their generation they have become the toothless and tired old guard that they once so despised. Nicky Wire, Manics' bassist and eternal antagonist may still wear too much eyeliner and have a penchant for feather boas, but gone is the vitriolic angry young man who promised that the band would auto-destruct. It was inevitable really – while the band may have grudges with the modern world they haven't got that much to spit bile about any PFAYM is a return to the Everything Must Go territory that catapulted the band into the mainstream consciousness in the mid-90s - epic guitars, spiralling string sections and thumping crescendos, and marks their most proficient and commercial output since their 1996 zenith. While it's a return to form of sorts, Wire's claim that the album would be 'heavy metal Tamla Motown' is stretching the reality of what is actually delivered. Despite the perennial claims that have preceded all of their albums, the inescapable fact is that it sounds just like a Manic Street Preachers album.

Much of the record is standard fare and owes much to longterm collaborator, Dave Eringa's sweeping production.

The majority of tracks are filled out with the grandeur of elaborate strings as well as a gospel choir, which, while offering soaring melodrama on tracks like Golden Platitudes, can't hide what are at times wafer-thin songs. The band had always intended for PFAYM to be commercially friendly, and the opening track, (It's Not War) Just The End Of Love sets the tone with huge riffs and a soaring string accompaniment that is akin to 'Tonight Tonight' era Smashing Pumpkins. The album as a whole is certainly geared towards the higher echelons of daytime radio playlists, and while veering in to the realms of cheesiness on the likes of Hazelton Avenue, (which inexplicably borrows from Lenny Kravitz's It Ain't Over Till It's Over), there is still enough earnestness in the songs for the band to just about pull it off. Indeed the album has a distinctly mid-90s vibe to it, particularly in I Think I Found It, which chortles along with something of a mod revival pomp ala Small Faces/Ocean Colour Scene. There are other genuine signs of life on the album, but every time tracks like the punk/glam tinted Auto-Intoxication, and A Billion Balconies Facing the Sun promise to blow you away, they are yet again drawn in to the same tired territory that fans - and detractors - of the Welsh stalwarts have heard over the past decade. As the band themselves put it, PFAYM is a final shot at 'mass communication' and while I seriously doubt it will cultivate the public's socialist leanings, it could well place them back at the top of the

Greenwich through the ages

THERE are hundreds of photographs of the borough in David Ramzam's illustrated history of Greenwich, and for people who see the area daily, the contemporary shots may not be the most revelatory: The Co-op – yay! Trafalgar Road with some cars on it – sweet! A distant glimpse of The 02 from a winterscabbed knoll - great!

No - it's the crumpled, sepia tinged black and whites scenes in Royal Greenwich Through Time that will interest Greenwich-o-philes.. The stark contrasts between the 'before' and 'after' shots include a distinct lack of roadworks in Victorian times, and the fact that the children of the period look like 35year-olds. Deptford Creek in the 50s is a hive of activity; the over hanging top floor of the Three Crowns on East Street precarious. The comparison pics are well-trodden territory but interesting nonetheless. An ancient still of the town centre with the church in the background shows that the pedestrian island has been there since horse drawn carts clopped along, and a trip to 'the seaside' on Greenwich beach in the 1930s is a particularly enduring image. But again the modern shots are found wanting. Which is ironic given the great strides in technology since the book's first lot were taken, and a contrast which leaves a few of the new batch looking just a little half-baked. Many appear hastily snapped, with scant care into reframing the new images against the old. And some of the local spots that are so revered today have just not been given the context they deserve: Could the author really not have sourced a recent picture looking up Trafalgar Road with St. Alfege's not swathed in plastic and scaffold?

But it's easy to forget that the character of a place is really all about the people - past and present - and it is when Ramzam documents the locals that the book shines. Showing that though little may have changed for longsuffering Charlton fans in the Bugle Horn since the 1950s, donkey riders on Blackheath have long since forsaken petticoats for more comfortable gear.

The latest installment in the Halo games saga is set to be the final fling for the much lauded video game

THE most highly anticipated game of the year was released last month on the Xbox 360. Halo: Reach grossed $200 million on its launch day, and saw thousands of fans queuing overnight to get their hands on the first person shooter.

H:R is the prequel to the main trilogy of Halo games - set in the year 2552 players are in control of Noble 6, a member of the elite supersoldier squad where the battle for the world of Reach is ongoing. After games developer Bungie finished the fight in 2007 with Halo 3, there was only one way it could go: back. And that's where Halo: Reach begins, before the events of the game's seminal opener in 2001, Halo: Combat Evolve. But that's where the nostalgia ends. Everything else in the Halo universe is looking forwards: Graphics, audio and multiplayer all see vast improvements over previous iterations of the series, and the whole game serves as a fitting farewell from Bungie to Halo fans. Longtime Halo fans will be happy to see their favourite gameplay style return for the prequel, whilst the two levels set in aerial vehicles (one in space) inject new depth into the series. Reach's story is compelling, however it does lack depth. But where the game really shines is the multiplayer options, there is new refined game modes which can literally eat hours of time without vou even realising it. Halo Reach provides the single best multiplayer experience I've ever enjoyed on the Xbox 360, and with DLC (downloadable content) rumours beginning to swirl, we can expect many more hours of fun in the Zac attack!

Head in the clouds

CHARLIE ST. CLOUD is a film based on a thoughtful and original book by Ben Sherwood about a guy who has everything going for him but loses it all in one pivotal moment. Teen heartthrob Zac Efron plays Charlie, a young man who lives one of those great American lives on the perpetually sunny East Coast of America. You know the sort: lying in the sun, having neat parties with your great friends and beating the girls off with a rusty oar. Well, that is Charlie's life until he takes his kid brother for a drive one day. Cut to Zac working full time in a graveyard playing catch with the ghost of his brother, yes, it's the same film but now the action has moved to the UK. Sort of. Anyway, Zac has given up his chance of a 'Stanford degree' whatever that is, and now leads this slightly unhealthy life in a kind of purgatory where he tries to live with the results of his actions. Luckily for the viewer, Zac might just be saved by an old school friend played by Amanda Crew, (who doesn't look like anybody I have seen on Friends Reunited), a gorgeous but, of course, super talented yachtswoman who might just save our boy from his melancholy reflections. One for the girls, then.

Zoe about to start competing in Delhi

WEIGHTLIFTING star Zoe Smith is due to start competing for England in the Commonwealth Games in Delhi at 9.30am London time (2pm in Delhi) tomorrow, Wednesday, October 6.

The heat and the expectations will make it a tough task for the 16-year-old Abbey Wood schoolgirl who won the Commonwealth Youth Gold two years ago.

Zoe - supported by the Greenwich Starting Blocks charity - says facilities in India are not as bad as some reports seem to suggest. And now she's aiming to get in top form. She said just before she left: "I'm not sure whether it's the enormity of it all starting to kick in - especially the worry about not living up to people's expectations, especially those of my coach - but my training hasn't been going as well as I'd have hoped this week "I'm really hoping that I can get all the negative stuff out of the way and once I'm out there and training in Delhi that things will start to improve. She added: "I know that the BBC are covering the Games but don't know for sure that they'll show any weightlifting There's been a lot of talk about my chances of becoming England's first female weightlifting medallist and, if I'm honest, that's quite a weight to carry - excuse the pun! There is so much that can go wrong on the day - but hopefully things will go well. Only time will tell. "On September 24 I was lucky enough to be invited to the British Olympic Ball at the Grosvenor Hotel, which was a fund-raising evening in aid of the 2012 Olympics.

"Apparently there were over 1,000 guests. I seriously did start to wonder if I'd been invited by mistake, so it was a nice surprise to be approached for interviews when I arrived on the red carpet."

Inept Addicks fail to make a kick-start at Brentford

Alexander, who clubbed the ball into the roof of the net through a tableau of defensive statues.

Discarded former Addick Weston had a point to prove and was beating Simon Francis at will. On the half hour, he ran at the hapless right back before accurately picking out Toumani Diagouraga, in support outside the penalty area. One capable touch set up the midfielder's sizzling drive into the top left corner. Already on their way to defeat, his victims hardly seemed bothered.

As good as they were for almost 45 minutes against Dagenham a week earlier, Charlton were dreadful here. Their first shot on target - a weak effort prodded by Scott Wagstaff straight untroubled Ben Hamer - didn't arrive until stoppage time.

It's one thing, of course, to be outclassed, quite another to accept the situation with such lack of interest, Kick-ass Bubba Kincaid wouldn't put up with it (his chaps are getting their own asses kicked as I write, by the way). And nor did Parkinson, who turned the tide by the simple tactic of summoning Kyel Reid from the substitutes' bench during the interval.

It mystifies some of us that Reid doesn't start because galvanises a colourless side. He immediately began to persecute right back Kevin O'Connor with tricky running and close control.

A perfect cross created a chance which Gary Doherty wastefully headed wide but the irrepressible sub continued to worry the Bees. With a quarter hour remaining, he beat O'Connor again before pulling back a dipping cross for Wagstaff to connect sweetly and volley left-footed into the bottom right corner.

The late arrival of Akpo Sodje for Jonathan Fortune increased the pressure on the wavering home side. Sodje's muscularity helped him reach easily fielded his tame shot. The keeper was more sternly tested in alertly smothering Sodje's last-gasp blockbuster as his exhausted colleagues discovered that football is hell. Just like golf. And, to a lesser extent, war.

ate Reid cross too much for Dons to bear

A LATE flash of quality, something that had been conspicuously lacking during a trying evening, was enough to see off colourless MK Dons 1-0 in midweek and reestablish Charlton among the League One contenders, writes Kevin Nolan.

It not only restored a smile to manager Phil Parkinson's face but probably spared Tuesday's referee, best left nameless, (don't mention the Waugh!), the even rougher side of his tongue. Parkinson's normal good humour had been badly ruffled three days earlier by the bizarre officiating of one Jon Moss.

This bloke was even worse than Moss, his series of idiosyncratic decisions topped by the first half leniency he showed to Danny Woodards for hauling down Lee Martin in full cry for goal. If there was a covering defender on the scene, he was keeping a scrupulously low profile.

Woodards received yellow rather than the red treatment he deserved.

The Addicks were still spinning their wheels when Paul Benson was rugby tackled inside the penalty area by Mathias Kouo-Doumbe on the hour. This myopic refereeing chap again saw nothing in it. Now it's not the done thing at Charlton to moan about officials (Parkinson's bang-torights verbal GBH on Moss being a notable exception) so do let me do it for them. Try Specsavers, mate! If they can straighten out Postman Pat. nobody's beyond help. Fortunately, there was nothing to dispute about Charlton's winner, which richly rewarded Parkinson's gamble in introducing dead leg victim Kyel Reid as a 75thminute substitute. Reid brought with him pace. directness and the ability to cross early, upon which Benson is reputed to thrive. Attacking Woodards on the left flank, he whipped in a low centre without feeling it necessary to beat his opponenť; Benson read it perfectly, lost his marker and poked home his overdue first goal for the club. His relief and joy were matched by an ecstatic crowd. There were other ticks in Parkinson's plus column.

Ross Worner registered his first meaningful clean sheet with one fine reaction save to his credit, while Jon Fortune successfully negotiated 90 minutes on his return from a 21-month absence.

Just the stuff to cheer you up when you're due in court.

Charlton (4-4-1-1): Worner, Francis, Fortune, Doherty, Fry, Wagstaff (Abbott, 70), Semedo, Racon, Jackson (Reid, 75), Martin, Benson. Not used: Daniels, Llera, Sodje, Stavrinou, Tuna

Brentford Charlton

by Kevin Nolan

A FIRST half performance of staggering ineptitude by Charlton practically handed bottom-of-thetable Brentford three precious points in their struggle to fend off relegation.

It's early days yet but more puny opposition like this will rocket the Bees into mid-table in no time. They might even meet up there with these mediocre Addicks.

Exactly what Phil Parkinson made of those opening 45 minutes wasn't easy to assess. Banged up in the stands doing a two-stretch, he was in no position to influence their outcome.

It looks as if he got stuck into his passionless players at half-time, to be fair, because a different side took over after the break, halved their two-goal deficit and reduced their hosts to shameless timewasting.

shameless timewasting.
It all proved too little too late but positively begged the question - what does it take to get these lackadaisical players interested from the start?

Deprived of hands-on control, Parkinson was probably envious of the gung-ho oratory of American fighter ace Biff "Bubba" Kincaid. Anyone who can convince a bunch of middle-aged millionaire Ryder Cup golfers they were going to war instead of "spoiling a good walk" demands at least perverted respect.

Inept Addicks totally without a kick start

If I wasn't such a terse, taciturn, laconic kinda military guy, in fact, I could electrify the Addicks' dressing room with my National Service experiences in Cyprus. But I choose not to talk about them. The pain's still raw. There was no counselling then. Let's just say demob came none too soon.

Shorn of their leader, meanwhile, Charlton hardly managed a kick during the first half. Dispirited, disconsolate, dishevelled, they were passive onlookers while Brentford did as they liked.

The West Londoners made hay as long as the drizzle lasted and were good value for their two-goal interval lead. The visitors, meanwhile, gave new legs to the old chestnut about being lucky to score nil.

A spectacular save by restored keeper Rob Elliot, which turned aside Myles Weston's crunching volley in the first minute, set the scene.

Brentford overcame their disappointment, turned up the heat and were not kept waiting long to take the lead. An inswinging corner from Sam Wood was scrambled to Gary
